“ Hi Mom. It's Christmas Eve, and our family is missing you terribly. It's been a very, very difficult year. While trying to mend our hearts after your loss, we've lost Uncle Pete along the way. And just last night....we lost Sofara I am sure that you were there to welcome them both home. God is most definitely building His mighty army. Although it's extremely painful, we stand firm in God's perfect plan and remain steadfast that His will is being done. It is all our goal to be in Heaven with Christ Jesus. We love and miss you mom. Continue to watch over us. Merry Christmas Eve in Heaven

“ I remember when we lost Zag last year. You and dad were the very first people to come to the house....to offer our family comfort. It was because you guys knew what it felt like....to lose your oldest son. I remember you walking through the door....and I hugged you...and you spoke words of love and support. It was who you were, mom. I will never forget. I know now that you were going through your own personal health issues at the time, and it makes me even more grateful for you. We miss you so very much. It feels so surreal that you're not here on earth with us anymore; calling your son to give him a hard time I know he misses you like crazy. He's often quiet; in his own thoughts. We love you, mom. We remain comforted knowing that you are celebrating everyday with Jesus, singing and praising God, and that your body and health are fully and completely restored Until we meet again on that glorious day in Heaven, we will miss you forever here on earth. Say hello to Zag for me! Love you, mom! Love, Ana
